INTRODUCTION.

THE copper-plate inscriptions published in this brochure belong to the Śrī Śaṅkarāchārya Maṭha at Kumbhakōṇam. His Holiness the present Svāmi of this maṭha commanded me to edit all the copper-plate records preserved in the treasury of the maṭha and for this purpose placed for some time all the original documents at my disposal. Impressions of these grants were prepared under my supervision and their texts are edited from the paper impressions thus obtained. The records are ten in number. They consist of:—

(1) an inscription of the reign of Vijayagaṇḍa-gōpāladēva engraved upon a single plate which belongs to a set of which all others are lost: the remaining plate, the one available now, is the last one of the set;

(2 & 3) two inscriptions belonging to the reign of the Vijayanagara king Vīra Nārasiṁha, the elder brother of the great Kṛishṇadēvarāya. These are complete documents;

(4 & 5) two inscriptions of the time of Kṛishṇadēvarāya;

(6) a fragment consisting of the first plate of a set whose other plates are lost;

(7) an inscription of the time of the Pudukkōṭṭai king Vijaya-Raghunātharāya Toṇḍaimāṉ;

(8) an inscription belonging to the reign of the Madura Nāyaka king, Vijayaraṅga-Chokkanāthayya;

(9) an inscription partly in Sanskrit, partly in Persian and partly in Telugu, a firman issued by the Emperor of Delhi (?); and

(10) lastly an inscription of the time of Akkaṇṇa and Mādaṇṇa, the two brāhmaṇa ministers of the Kuṭb Shāhi Sultans.

From a study of these documents it becomes patent that the Kāmakōṭi-pīṭha was situated in Kāñchīpuram till at least A.D. 1686. During the earlier part of the stay at Kāñchīpura of the svāmis of this line they had their maṭha in Vishṇu Kāñchi, on the west of the temple of Hastiśailanātha, that is, of the Varadarājasvāmin; it is only at a comparatively later period a new maṭha seems to have been erected in Śivakāñchi. Owing to the frequent raids of the Mussalmans on the flourishing town of Kāñchipuram, the svāmis were put to great inconvenience in the performance of their duties and the tradition, which is a comparatively recent one and consequently worth believing, states that Pratāpasiṁha, the Rāja of Tanjore invited the then svāmi of the Kāmakōṭi-pīṭha to shift his head-quarters temporarily to his capital city, Tanjore, and that the invitation was accepted and the svāmi immigrated into Tanjore with the golden image of Kāmākshī. The Tanjore Rāja received the svāmi with due honours, built for him a maṭha as also a temple for the Goddess Kāmākshī. Finding Kumbhakōṇam better suited to the inclinations and duties of the svāmi, he expressed his desire to spend his time there; a new maṭha was erected for him at Kumbhakōṇam on the bank of the river Kāvērī, which continues to the present time the head-quarters of the svāmis of the Kāmakōṭi-pīṭha; thenceforth it began to be known as the Kumbhakōṇam maṭha of Śaṅkarāchārya. There is a stone inscription in the maṭha belonging to the reign of the Tanjore king, Sarfoji, which is dated the Śaka year 1743; it states that he constructed the temple (i.e., maṭha) for the residence of (the god) Chandramauḷiśvara (the aspect of Śiva worshipped in the maṭha).* The second compartment in which this inscription is found is said to have been erected when prince Sarfoji returned from Benares. Before that, the pūjā-gṛiha was in the first compartment and it is still known by the name of paḷaya pūjai uḷḷu.

* श्री [॥*] श्रीचन्द्रमौळेश्वरस्वामिस निवासार्थं राजश्री छत्रपति शेरफोजीमहाराज कृत आलय प्रतिष्ठा शालिवाहनशक १७४३ वृषनामसंवत्सर माघ शुद्ध पंचमी भानुवार ॥

Regarding the traditional history of the Kāmakōṭi-pīṭha, its antiquity and its superiority over the other maṭhas of Śaṅkarāchārya, a number of Sanskṛit works have been written; of these the most important one is the Guru-ratnamālikā-stōtram by Sadāśivabrahmēndra Sarasvati with a commentary on it written by Ātmabōdhēndra Sarasvati; both the author and the commentator were students in and eventually occupied the pontifical seat in this maṭha. They lived in the latter half of the 17th century A.D. Both of them have collected all the facts then available to them and put them into their works, but how far they have proved themselves critical will be shown in a separate article which I am preparing for publication elsewhere.

We learn the names of four svāmis, their time and their contemporaries from the records under review, namely:—

No.	Date.	Name of the Svami.	Contemporary king.
1	...	Sadāśiva Sarasvati; his disciple,	.....
2	S'1429	Mahādēva Sarasvati ...	Vīra Nārasiṁhadēva.
3	S'1444	Chandraśēkhara Sarasvati (disciple of Mahādēva Sarasvati).	Kṛishṇadēvarâya.
	S'1450	Do.	Do.
4	S'1608	Mahādēvēndra Sarasvati (disciple of Chandraśēkhara).	Abul Hasan Kutbshah. (Akkaṇṇa and Mādaṇṇa).

From the records belonging to the Śriṅgēri Jaghir published by Mr. L. Rice in his Epigraphia Carnatica, Vol. VI, pp. 190, 206, we learn that the earliest available record found in that maṭha is dated A.D. 1346; whereas the earliest known document in the custody of the Kumbhakōṇam maṭha belongs to the year A.D. 1291. If we may judge of the relative antiquity of the two maṭhas from the epigraphical records existing with them at present, we are obliged to state that the Kumbhakōṇam maṭha seems to be older; but, I am fully aware that such a conclusion is and can not be final.

AN INSCRIPTION OF THE REIGN OF VIJAYAGAṆḌA GŌPĀLA DĒVA.

THE subjoined inscription is engraved on the first side of a single plate which is the last one of a set, the remaining plates of which are lost. The plate is shaped exactly like those of the Vijayanagara period and has a ring hole on the curved top-portion; it had no ring when it came to me for examination.

The record is written in Grantha characters resembling those of the inscription at Śrīraṅgam of Jaṭāvarman Sundara Pāṇḍya which is edited in Ep. Ind. Vol. III; (See plate facing p. 14). The language of the inscription is Sanskṛit. It records that the gift of the village of Ambikāpuram was made to the Śaṅkarāchāryasvāmi, for feeding daily 108 brāhmaṇas, by Śrī Vijaya Gaṇḍagōpāladēva, on the tenth tithi of the bright fortnight of the solar month Karkaṭaka of the cyclic year Khara; this day corresponded with a Monday and the nakshatra which has Mitra as its deity. Regarding the date, the Hon. Mr. L. D. Swāmikkaṇṇu Piḷḷai, M.A., LL. B., B. L., etc. has kindly supplied me with the following particulars: "Khara: Sūrya in Karkaṭaka rāśi, Monday, Śukla Dvādaśi and the nakshatra which has for its deity Mitra who presides over Anurādha. I find however that in A. D. 1291, which was Khara, on Monday, 9th July, the tithi ended at 53 ghaṭikās after mean sunrise while nakshatra Jyēshṭhā was current on the same day, having begun at 21 ghaṭikās after sunrise on the previous day when nakshatra Anurādha ended. I believe therefore that the date meant is Monday, 9th July 1291 A.D., and that the nakshatra for the day was Jyēshthā; not Anurādha which is presided over by Mitra. The solar month was Karkaṭaka." The boundaries of the village Ambikāpuram are given as follows:—On the west Gṛiddhrapuram, on the east Kāñchīpuram, on the south Kaidaḍuppūr village and on the north Śiṟunanni; it is said to have been situated on the north of the river Vēgavati in the Eyiṟkōṭṭam. The Śaṅkarāchāryāsvāmi, the donee of the grant, is mentioned as residing in a maṭha situated on the west of the temple of the god Hastiśailanāthasvāmi and that he was ever engaged in giving instruction in Vēdānta to his disciples and feeding brāhmāṇas.

The initial date of the reign of the king Vijayagaṇḍagōpāla is known from other inscriptions to be A. D. 1260. This Telugu-chōḍa king, whose political relationship with the regular line of the Chōḷas, which ended with Rājēndrachōla III, son of Rājarāja III, is unknown, was governing the Toṇḍaimaṇḍalam soon after the Paṇḍya inroads were over. The record under consideration, should have belonged to the 31st year of his reign.

In his Annual Report on Epigraphy for the year 1915, Mr. H. Kṛishṇa Śāstri writes, "It is not clearly stated in the record if the maṭha presided over by the Śaṅkarāchārya herein referred to was identical with the Śaṅkarāchārya maṭha at Conjeevaram". I fail to realise the difficulty of Mr. Śāstri in the matter of the identification of the maṭha mentioned in the record with that now known as the Śaṅkarāchārya maṭha of Conjeevaram (or Kumbhakōṇam). The main functions of the gurus of the Śaṅkarāchārya maṭha are the performance of pūjā to the image of Chandramauḷīśvara, Brāhmaṇa santarpaṇa or the feeding of the brāhmaṇas and Advaita upadēśa; it is usual to refer to these three items in every letter issued from the maṭha to śishyas. All these three functions are mentioned also in the copper-plate, namely, nityānnadāna, nigamānta-rahasyārtha-vivaraṇa and the name Indumauḷi, the words guru and śishya; all these clearly indicate the maṭha as that of Śaṅkarāchārya of Conjeevaram. Besides these, the copper-plate under notice is at the present time in the possession of the svāmi of the Kumbhakōṇam (Kāñchi Kāmakōṭi) maṭha, who claims through an unbroken line of succession, descent in the Kāmakōṭi maṭha. These facts appear to point clearly to the identity of the Śaṅkarāchārya maṭha of the inscription with the Śaṅkarāchārya maṭha of Conjeevaram.

The following are the names of places, etc., which occur in this document:—Ambikāpuram, Gṛiddhrāpuram, Kāñchīpuram, Kaidaḍuppūr, Śirunanni, Eyiṟ-kōṭṭam, the river Vēgavati and Hastiśailam. Ambikāpuram is now known as Ambi and is situated on the west of Kāñchīpuram. Gridhrapuram is a meaningless translation of the Tamil name Tiruppuṭkuḷi. Eyiṟ-kōṭṭam takes its name from the village of Eyil in the South Arcot District. Kāñchīpuram also belonged to this Kōṭṭam which was evidently divided into two halves by the river Vēgavati and in the northern of the two divisions was situated the village of Ambikāpuram. Vēgavati is the small river which passes through the town of Kāñchīpuram and empties itself into the Pālār near Timmarājanpēṭṭai. On the south of Ambi there is a village named Kadirpūr and on the north another named Śiruṇai. These may be identical with the Kaidaḍuppūr and Śiṟunanni of our record. Hastiśailam is the Attiyūr of the Vaishṇavas, that is, the present Vishṇu-Kāñchī; the temple of the God Varadarāja is situated on a raised platform which is called the hastiśailam. There is said to be a deserted maṭham near the temple of Varadarāja, which belongs to the Śaṅkarāchāryas of the Kāmakōṭi-pīṭha. But, at a later period, the maṭha had been shifted to Śiva-Kāñchi. In the Maṭhāmnāya, the name of the temple near which the Kāmakōṭi Śāradā maṭha was situated is said to be Satyavratakshētra, another name of Attiyūr. Hence the maṭha should have been situated in Vishṇu-Kāñchi and near the temple of Varadarāja-svāmi.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

Śrī Śaṅkarārya-guru, residing in the maṭha situated on the west of the temple of Hastiśaila-nātha is expounding the Vēdānta to his disciples and is delighting in feeding daily a number of brāhmaṇas. To him, in the year Khara, when the sun was in the auspicious Karkaṭakarāśi, in the nakshatra which has Mitra as its deity, in the bright fortnight conjoined with a Monday, the tenth tithi, in this auspicious muhūrtta, for feeding sumptuously every day a hundred and eight brāhmaṇas, the village of Ambikāpuram was granted. The boundaries of this village are, on the east, Gṛiddhrapura; on the west, Kāñchīpura; on the south, Kaidaḍuppūr and on the north Śirunanni. This village is situated on the north of the river Vêgavati and is surrounded by gardens containing cocoanut, mango, jack, palmyra and other trees; is sweet-smelling with the flowers of various trees in the gardens; is situated in the Eyirkōṭṭam and is named Ambikāpuram; by this grant (to the svāmi) the gratification of the god of the temple on the Hastiśaila is sought for as long as the sun and the moon last. With an intensely pious mind meditating upon god, the king, Śrī Gaṇḍagōpāla-chōḷa, (granted this village) to Śaṅkarārya-yōgi, signing this deed of land-grant with his own hand, with the expectation of obtaining great merit for making this grant. Between the protection of charity and the giving of it, the former is of greater merit than the latter; by gift (only) svarga (which is transient) is obtained, but protection affords abode in the imperishable region (a more desirable place than svarga).

No. II.

AN INSCRIPTION OF THE REIGN OF VĪRA NĀRASIṀHADĒVA ŚAKAṠAMVAT 1429.

THE inscription edited below is written in Nandināgari characters and in the Sanskṛit language, and is engraved upon three plates; on the first side of the first plate there is writing, but cut so faintly that to take a good impression is not easy; it begins an inscription with the usual Śrī Gaṇādhipatayē namah and Namastuṅga, &c. Evidently, the engraver did not mean that the writing on this side should be taken into account. The regular beginning of the record under consideration is found only on the second side of the first plate and ends on the first side of the last plate. Though the preservation of the inscription is good, its execution is very shabby; the engraver begins it with big bold letters on the first plate and reduces the size of the letters in the subsequent plates to less than a third of those on the first side. The alphabet itself is rather peculiar and the formation of the letters somewhat curious.

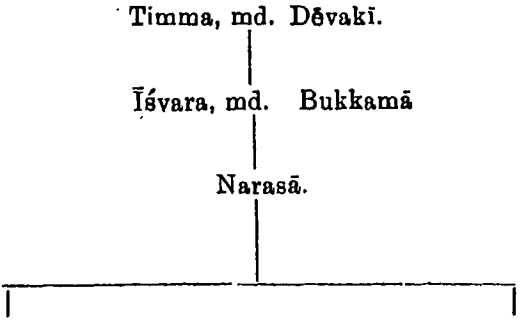
The grant belongs to the reign of the Vijayanagara king, Vīra Nārasiṁhadēva, the eldest son of Narasā Nāyaka and the elder brother of the illustrious Kṛishṇadēvarāya. The genealogy of the king is, as usual, traced from the moon ; Budha, Purūravas, Āyu, Nahusha, Yayāti and Turvasu are claimed to be their ancestors by the members of the Tuḷuva dynasty, that is, the dynasty to which Vīra Nārasiṁha and Kṛishṇadēva belonged. The really historical genealogy is as follows :—



Of these, Narasā, the father of the donor, is said to have given with due ceremonies the sixteen mahā-dānas in such holy places as Rāmēśvara, etc. Constructing a bridge across the Kāvērī when it was in full flood, he crossed over it and captured the town of Śrīraṅgapaṭṭaṇa and set up there a pillar of victory; then, he conquered the Chēra, the Chōḷa, the Pāṇḍya, the king of Madhura, the Turushkas and the Gajapati king. His son by Tippāji was Vīra Nārasiṁha, the donor of this and the next grant. The one under notice is dated S'1429 said to be corresponding to the cyclic year Śukla: in this year, on the Māgha-puṇyakāla in the month of Māgha, the king Vīra Nārasiṁha granted the villages of Elichchūr and Veṇpākkam to Mahādēva Sarasvati, the disciple of Sadāśiva Sarasvati, in the presence of the god Virūpāksha, on the bank of the river Tuṅgabhadrā. The village Elichchūr belonged to the Nīrvaḷūr-paṟṟu which was situated in the Chaṅgalipaṭṭu Sīma, belonging to the Śeṅkāṭṭu-kkōṭṭam, a sub-division of the Chandragirirājya of the Jayachōḷa-maṇḍala. Its boundaries are given as follows:—On the north, Paṇyuruṭṭi; on the south Pūḍi; on the west, Paneyūr and on the east Vaḍakkēpākkam. The boundaries of Veṇpākkam are given as follows:—On the north Paṇyuruṭṭi; on the south, Ullavūr; on the west, Vāraṇavāsi and on the east . . . At the end of the record occurs the sign-manual of the king, the word Śrī Virūpāksha, written in the Telugu-Kannaḍa characters. This copper-plate document was engraved by Vīraṇāśāri, son of Mallaṇāśāri. It is worth noting that the title of the caste is written in this and the next document as āśāri, the usual way in which it is pronounced at the present time, not as āchāri, as usual in other copperplate records.

The year S' 1429 does not really correspond to the cyclic year Śukla, which falls in the year S' 1432. The names of places, &c., which occur in this document are Jayachōḷa-maṇḍalam, Chandragirirājyam, Śeṅkāṭṭu-kkōṭṭam, Chaṅgalippaṭṭu-sīma, Nīvaḷūr-paṭṭaṇa, Paneyūru, Vaḍakkēpākkam, Paṇyuruṭṭi, Pūḍi, Elichchūru, Uḷḷavūru, Āndināḍu, Vāraṇavāsi and Veṇpākkam. Of these, Jayachōḷa-maṇḍalam is the same as the Jayaṅgoṇḍa-chōḷa-maṇḍalam of the Chōḷa period. Be it stated here that the Vijayanagara Empire, without meddling with the ancient divisions of the country which fell to its lot, retained the old divisions in almost all cases. Jayaṅgoṇḍachōḷa-maṇḍalam included the whole of Toṇḍaimaṇḍalam and perhaps a few other parts of the country adjoining it. Chandragiri is the modern town of the same name and is the headquarters of the Chandragiri Tālūkā. It was made their seat of Government by the Sāḷuvas before their usurpation of the throne of the Vijayanagara Empire; hence this division was retained as such and called the Chandragiri-rājyam and a governor was appointed to preside over it. Śeṅkāṭṭu-kōṭṭam is also an ancient name; it was, in the days of the Chōḷas, a sub-division of the Jayaṅgoṇḍachōḷa-maṇḍalam and takes its name from the village of Śeṅgāḍu in the Chingleput Tālūkā. Changalipaṭṭu-sīma is a further sub-division of the Śeṅgāṭṭu-kkōṭṭam, but is made such evidently at a later time; it is named after Chengalpaṭṭu (the Śeṅgaḷunīrpaṭṭu of the older inscriptions and the Chingleput of the present day), the head-quarters of the Tālūkā of the same name and a junction station on the South Indian Railway. Nīvaḷūr-paṭṭaṇa, Paneyūru, Elichchūru, Paṇyuruṭṭi, Vāraṇavāsi, Veṇpākkam, Uḷḷavūru and Pūḍi are the same as Nīrvaḷūr, Panayūr, Eluchchūr, Paṇruṭṭi, Vāraṇavāsi, Veṇpākkam, Uḷḷavūr and Pūṇḍi in the Conjeevaram Tālūkā.

ADORATION TO ŚRI GAṆĀDHIPATI.

(Verse 1). Adoration to Śambhu (Śiva) who is adorned as with a chāmara, with the moon that kisses his lofty head, and who is the principal pillar at the building of the city of the three worlds.

(Verse 2). May the staff-like tusk of Hari (Vishṇu) who assumed in sport the form of a boar [1] —resting on which the earth with Mount Mēru as its apex resembled an umbrella, protect you.

* Translations of verses 1, 3, 5 to 8, 10 to 17, are of Dr. Hultzsch; those of verses 2, 4 and 9 are of Messrs. Butterworth and Venugopala Chetti.

1. This refers to the boar incarnation of Vishṇu.

(Verse 3). May that lustre (Gaṇēśa)—which dispels the darkness of obstacles, and which, though it has the head of an elephant (gaja), was born from the mountain-daughter (Agajā) and is worshipped even by Hari (Vishṇu),—produce happiness.

(Verse 4). From the milky ocean which was churned by the gods arose like fresh butter the luminary (moon) by which darkness is dispelled [1].

(Verse 5). The son of this (moon) was Budha, whose name (was made) true to its meaning by his unequalled austerities. In consequence of his pious deeds (he obtained a son), Purūravas. (The son) of him, who destroyed the life (āyus) of his enemies by the strength of his arm, was Āyus. His (son) was Nahusha. His (son) was Yayāti, who was fierce in battle (and) famed on earth. (The son) of this husband of the glorious Dēvayānī was Turvasu, who resembled the Vasus.

(Verse 6). In his race shone king Timma, whose wife was Dēvakī, (and) who was famous among the princes of Tuḷuva just as Kṛishṇa (shone) in the race of Yadu.

1. The allusion is to the churning of the ocean of milk by the gods. The moon is supposed to have then sprung from it.

(Verse 7). From him was born king Īśvara, whose wife was Bukkamā (and) who was the fearless and virtuous crest-jewel of kings.

(Verse 8). From this lovely son of Dēvakī was born king Narasā, just as Kāma from (Kṛishṇa) the son of Dēvakī.

(Verse 9). Rendered famous for various good deeds, with a delighted mind, surrounded by wise men, he again and again made the sixty kinds of gift according to prescribed rules, at Rāmēśvaram and every other holy place, thus increasing (lit. rendering superfluous) his great renown which was sung by the denizens of the three worlds.

(Verse 10). Resplendent was he, who quickly bridged the Kāvērī [1] (though) it consisted of a rapid current of copious water, crossed over it, straightway captured alive in battle with the strength of his arm the enemy, brought his kingdom and (the city of) Śrīraṅgapaṭṭaṇa [2] under his power and set up a pillar of fame,—his heroic deeds being praised in the three worlds, (which appeared to be) the palace (of his glory).

1. Śrīraṅgapaṭṭaṇa, vulgo Seringapatam, which, later on, became the capital of the Maisūr Oḍeyars and of Ṭīpu is situated on an island of the Kāvērī.

2. Literally '(that compound ending in) paṭṭaṇa, the first member of which is Śrīraṅga.' (On similar expressions see Hultzsch's South-Indian Inscriptions, Vol. 1, p. 166, note 6).

(Verse 11). Having conquered the Chēra, the Chōḷa, the proud Pāṇḍya (who was) the lord of Madhurā, the brave Turushka, the Gajapati king and others, he, who was exceedingly famed from the banks of the Gaṅgā to Laṅkā and from the slopes of the eastern to those of the western mountain, spread his command like a garland on the heads of kings.

(Verses 12 and 13). Just as Rāma and Lakshmaṇa (were born) to Daśaratha by his queens Kausalyā and the glorious Sumitrā, (thus) two brave (but) modest sons, prince Vīra Nṛisiṁha and prince Kṛishṇarāya, were born to king Nṛisiṁha by his queens Tippāji and Nāgaḷa (respectively).

(Verse 14). The illustrious Vīra-Nārasiṁha, seated on a jewelled throne at Vijayanagara, surpassing in fame (and) wisdom Nṛiga, Naḷa, Nahusha and (all) other (kings) on earth, being voluntarily praised by the Brāhmaṇas (and) winning all hearts —ruled the kingdom from (Rāma's) Bridge to (Mount) Sumēru and from the mountain of the east to the western mountain.

(Verse 15). He performed various gifts at the Golden Hall,[1] at the shrine of the holy Virūpākshadēva,[2] at the town of the holy lord of Kāḷahasti,[3] on Vēṅkaṭādri,[4] at Kāñchī, at Śrīśaila, [5] at Sōṇaśaila[6] at the sacred (city of) Harihar,[7] at Ahōbaḷa,[8] at Saṁgama, at Śrīraṅga[9] at Kumbhaghōṇa,[10] at the sinless tīrtha of Mahānandi[11] (and) at Nivṛitti.

(Verse 16). The streams of water (poured out) at copious great gifts of various kinds, which

1. Kanaka-sadas is a synonym of Kanaka-sabhā, 'the Golden Hall' at the temple of Chidambaram in the South Arcot District.

2. This is the old name of the Pampāpati temple in Hampe.

3. This town is now the residence of a Zemindar in the North Arcot district.

4. Vēṅkaṭādri, 'the hill of Veṅkaṭa' is the name of the holy mountain (Tirumalai) near Tirupati in the North Arcot district.

5. In the Karnūl district.

6. Śōṇaśaila or Śōṇāchala, 'the red mountain' is the hill of Tiruvaṇṇāmalai in the South Arcot district.

7. This town is situated in the Mysore territory on the frontier of Dharwad.

he performed at Gōkarṇa[1] at Rāma's Bridge, and at all other sacred places in the world, frustrated the eagerness of (Indra) the bearer of the thunderbolt, who was ardently rising to clip the wings[2] of the mountains, which were immersed in the ocean, that was being dried up by the dust of the hoofs of the troops of his prancing horses.

(Verse 17). He performed (the gifts of) a mundane egg, a wheel of the universe, a pot containing the (five) elements, a jewelled cow, the seven oceans, a tree and a creeper of paradise, a celestial cow of gold, an earth of gold, a horse-chariot of gold, the weight of a man (in gold), a thousand cows, a horse of gold, a (golden vessel called) hēmagarbha, an elephant-car of gold, and five ploughs.

(Verses 18-21). This king who is distinguished by the birudas Rājādhirāja, Rājaparamēśvara, Mūru-rāyala-gaṇḍa, Para-rāyabhayaṅkara, the Indra's eagerness was frustrated, as the water poured out at the king's donations refilled the ocean, which the dust of his army had dried up, and thus saved the mountains from persecution.

Sultan among the Hindu Rājas, Dushṭa-śārddūla-marddana, Vīra-pratāpa etc., is adored by the kings of the Aṅga, the Vaṅga, the Kaliṅga etc., countries, saying 'O Vīradēva, Mahārāja! Be you victorious, May you live long.' Vīra Nārasiṁhamahārāya, who is as munificient as the kalpaka tree to the brāhmaṇas, who is valorous and whose fame is unsullied, shines on the jewelled throne in the middle of the city of Vijayanagara excelling even Nṛiga, Nahusha and Yayāti.

(ABSTRACT OF THE CONTENTS OF THE REMAINING PORTION OF THE DOCUMENT).

Ll. 60-69. In the Śālivāhana Śaka year one thousand four hundred and twenty-nine in the (cyclic) year Śukla, and on the auspicious occasion of the Māgha-mahōdaya in the month Māgha, the king granted in the presence of (the god) Virūpāksha on the bank of the river Tuṅgabhadra the villages of Elichchūr and Veṇpākkam to Mahādēva Sarasvati, disciple of Sadāśiva Sarasvati, who is a Paramahaṁsa-Parivrājakāchārya, seeking liberation; whose body is smeared with ashes, and adorned with rudrāksha-garlands; who is a great person, who is unaffected by the effects of cold and heat; who has studied thoroughly all the śāstras and who is also a tapasvi (a doer of tapas or penance); who has attained the eight yōga sādhanas, namely yama, niyama, etc., who is full of grace and is of bright intellect ; and resembles Śiva himself.

L. 69. The village of Elichchūr is situated in the Nīrvaḷūr-parṟu, in the Changalipaṭṭu-sīmē of the Cheṅgāṭṭukōṭṭam, which is a sub-division of the Chandragiri-rājya situated in the Jayachōḷa-maṇḍala ; it is situated on the east of the village of Paneyūr ; on the west of the village of Vaḍakkē-pakkam ; on the south of the village Paṇyuruṭṭi and on the north of Pūḍi. The village of Veṇpākkam is situated in the same paṟṟu, kōṭṭam, nāḍu and rājya as Elichchūr and its boundaries are :—

It is situated on the south of the great village of Paṇṇiruṭṭî, on the north of the superior village of Uḷḷavūru, on the east of the good village of Vāraṇa-vasi and on the west of the good village of . . . . This village is full of all sorts of vegetation. The charitable and famous king having prostrated in the sāshṭāṅga fashion, with love and veneration granted this village. "

May this copper-plate document of the king Vīra-Nārasiṁha, whose feet are made resplendent by the contact of the collection of gems in crowns of rival kings, be victorious on this earth ; this copper-plate grant was engraved by Vīraṇāśāri, son of Mallaṇāśāri.

As between gift and protection, the latter is more meritorious for by the former one attains svarga (which is not permanent) whereas by the latter, eternal bliss. Śrī Virūpāksha.

No. III.

A SECOND INSCRIPTION OF THE REIGN OF VĪRA NĀRASIṀHA OF THE SAME YEAR.

THIS record is exactly similar to the previous one even in the matter of the date: on the same occasion as in the former case, the village of Kuḍiyāntaṇḍalam was granted to the same Svāmi, Mahādēva Sarasvati, the disciple of Sadāśiva Sarasvati.

The village Kuḍiyāntaṇḍalam is said to have been situated on the Vamāvanpaṭṭu (Viṇṇavampaṭṭu?) of the Kāliyūrkōṭṭam, in the Valakūru Sīmā, situated in the Kachchināḍu, a sub-division of the Paḍavīḍu-rājya of the Jayachōḷamaṇḍala. It was bounded on the north by Kaḷakāṭūru; on the east by Śuriṭṭilūru; on the south by Śitteleppākkam and on the west by Kūtan-tāṅgal.

Of the names of places mentioned in this document we have already identified in dealing with the previous record Jayaṅgoṇḍaśōlamaṇḍalam.

Paḍavīḍu-rājyam takes its name from the village of Paḍavīḍu. Velkūru-sīmā is so named after Velkūru in the Chittoor Taluka; [Viṇṇa]-vambaṭṭu is in the Pōḷūr Tālūkā. Kāliyūr-kkōṭṭam is a division of the Chōḷa period. There are two Kaḷakāṭūrus, of which one is in the Conjeevaram Tālūkā of the Chingleput District, which does not appear to be the one that is referred to here; the other is in the Palmanēr Tālūkā of the N. Arcot district and this is perhaps the village which the inscription means to refer. Śuriṭṭilūru and Śitteleppākkam have to be identified with the villages of Śuruṭṭal and Śitteleppākkam in the Arcot Tālūkā. Kachchināḍu and Kūtamtāṅgal have to be looked for also in the N. Arcot district, though the List of Villages does not give their names in it. Kuḍiyāntaṇḍalam now goes by the name of Kuṇḍiyāntaṇḍalam and is situated in the N. Arcot district. The maṭha still owns some lands in this village.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.

(The translation of verses 1-21 is the same as in the previous document).

Verses 22-37½. In the Śaka year of the Śālivāhana (era) one thousand four hundred and twenty-nine, in the (cyclic) year Śukla, and on the auspicious occasion of the Māghamahōdaya in the month Māgha, the king granted in the presence of (the god) Virūpāksha, on the bank of the river Tuṅgabhadrā, the village of Kāvāntaṇḍalam which is situated in the Kāliyūrkōṭṭam in Vāma.... paṭṭu (Viṇṇavanpaṭṭu?), of the Kaḷakā[ṭu]ru-sīmā, belonging to the Kachchināḍu of the Paḍaivīḍu-rājya, a sub-division of the Jayachōḷamaṇḍala, to Mahādēva Sarasvati, disciple of Sadāśiva Sarasvati, (with his praises as in the previous document). south of the good village of Kaḷakāṭūru, on the west of the great village of Suriṭṭilūru, on the north of the village of Sitteleppākkam and on the east of Kūtantāṅgal. This village looks bright with the plenty of cocoanut, mango, jack, palmyra trees and all other vegetation.

(As in the previous document it is stated here that the engraving was done by Vīraṇāśāri, son of Mallaṇāśāri and then follows the verse extolling the merits of protecting a gift and the sign-manual of the Vijayanagara kings, Srī Virūpāksha).

Bronze : Veṅkaṭēśa Temple, Tirumala, Tirupati.

No. IV.

AN INSCRIPTION OF THE REIGN OF KṚISHṆADĒVARĀYA, ŚAKA SAMVAT 1444.

THIS inscription is also engraved on three plates; the writing begins on the second side of the first plate and ends on the first side of last one. The preservation and the execution of the writing are good. The alphabet of the record is Nandināgari and the language is Saṅskṛit. The sign-manual the words Śrī-Virūpāksha, occurring at the end of the record is, as usual, written in Telugu-Kannaḍa characters.

The inscription belongs to the reign of the king Kṛishṇadēvarāya and is dated the Śaka year 1444, which corresponded with the (cyclic) year Svabhānu. On the gō-dvādasi tithi in the bright half of the month Mārgaśīrsha, in this year, the king granted the villages of Poḍavūr and Kāṭṭuppattu to Chandrachūḍa Sarasvati, the disciple of Mahādēva Sarasvati; the grant was made on the bank of the river Kṛishnavēṇī and at the time of the grant the name of the village Poḍavūr was changed into Kṛishnarāyapuram. The Yati Chandrachūḍa Sarasvati is distinctly mentioned as a resident of Kāñchīpuram. The two villages mentioned are said to have been situated in Nīrvaḷūrnāḍu, a sub-division of Seṅgāṭṭukkōṭṭam, in the Mudukāṭṭupparru, which belonged to the Chandragirirājyam. The boundaries of Poḍavūr are given as follows:—

On the west of this village is situated the village of Seṅgōḍai;

on the north	Kandūr;
on the east	Akkāḷivēlūr; and on the south	Śēndamaṅgalam and those of Kāṭṭuppattu are:—

On the west of this village is situated the village of Śiruvāgai;

on the east	Parundūr;
on the north	Kōṭṭavākkam; and on the south	Śiruvaḷūr.

At the end of this copper-plate grant, it is stated that it was composed by Sabhāpati and engraved on copper-plates by Vīraṇāchāri, son of Mallaṇa. The historical information supplied in this record is identical with that obtained from the others belonging to this dynasty of Vijayanagara king and therefore need not be reiterated here or hereafter.

Seal belonging to No. II. Same Size.

Seal belonging to No. IV. Same Size.

Seal belonging to No. V. Same Size.

The Svāmi, Chandrachūḍa Sarasvati, should be the same as Chandraśēkhara Sarasvati of the list supplied by the Gururājaratnamālikā (as also of No. V below) and whose date as calculated from the list also comes to be S' 1429-1445. The word gō-dvādaśi occurs in other inscriptions also but it is not evident what the importance of this dvādaśi is.(1) The following are the places mentioned in the record: Chandragirirājyam, Mudukaṭṭupparṟu, Śeṅgāṭṭukkōṭṭam, Nīrvaḷūrnāḍu, Poḍavūr, Śeṅgōḍai, Kandūr, Akkāḷivēlūr, Śēndamaṅgalam, Śiruvāka, Parundūr, Kōṭṭavākkam, Śiruvaḷūr, Kāñchīpuram and the Kṛishṇavēṇī rïver. The two villages of Poḍavūr and Kāṭṭuppattu being said to be situated in the Nīrvaḷūrnāḍu, they and the villages bounding them should be looked for in the Conjeevaram Tālūka in which Nīrvaḷūr is situated. Poḍavūr is in the same Tālūkā and goes by the same name even now; but the name Kāṭṭuppattu does not occur in the List of Villages; it is perhaps to be identified with Kāṭṭēripattu. The villages Kandūr,

(1) In the inscription No. 53 belonging to the Koppa Tālūkā of the Kadūr District, Mysore State, this is called gōvatsa-dvādaśi. The name gō-dvādaśi occurs also in an inscription of the reign of the Āy or Vṛishṇi Chief, Vikramāditya Varaguṇa, A. D. 868. (See Trav. Arch. Series, Vol. I, p. 192).

Akkāḷivēlūr, Śēdamaṅgalam (evidently Śēndamaṅgalam), Parundūr, Kōṭṭavākkam, Śiruvāka and Śiruvaḷūr are to be identified with Kandūr, Śandavēlūr, Śēndamaṅgalam, Parundūr, Kōṭṭavākkam, Śiruvākkam and Śiruvaḷūr,—villages which are situated in the Conjeevaram Tālūkā of the Chingleput District. I am unable to identify Mudukkāṭṭupparṟu and Śeṅgōḍai. The river Kṛishṇavēṇī is the same as the modern Kṛishṇā river.

TRANSLATION.

(Verses 1 to 18) are the same as in II and III.

(Verses 18 and 19). When, having ruled his great kingdom without obstacles, this Indra of the earth, who was famed for virtue, had gone to heaven, as if it were in order to rule heaven (too), the illustrious king Kṛishṇarāya, whose valour was irresistible, bore the earth on his arm like a bracelet of jewels.

(Verse 20). It was probably through fear, lest everything should assume an identity of lustre from his fame, which was spread everywhere, that, of old, Śiva adopted a (third) eye on his forehead (as a distinguishing mark), Vishṇu, four arms, Brahmā four faces, Kāḷī a sword, Rāma a lotus, and Vāṇī a lute in her hand.

(Verse 21). Was it through anger, because they gave refuge to his enemies, that he dried up the seven oceans with the clouds of the dust of the earth, which was split by the horses of his numerous armies, and of his own accord created in their stead masses of oceans by the immeasurable waters (poured out) at his great gifts, which consisted of a mundane egg, a Mēru of gold, etc.?

(Verse 22). It was probably in order to obstruct the path of the chariot of the sun in the sky, with the view that the crowds of suppliants should enjoy as long as possible the riches given by him, that this lord of the earth set up in every part of the earth firmly fixed pillars, which were marked with (an account of) his expeditions for conquering each quarter and with (his) surnames (biruda) and the tops of which touched the clouds.

(Verse 23). Again and again, for the sake of supreme happiness, he performed according to rule those various gifts which are prescribed in the holy books, viz., the weight of a man in gold, &c., together with all minor gifts, at Kāñchi, at Śrīśaila, at Śōṇāchala, at the Golden Hall, on Vēṅkaṭādri and at all other temples and bathing places.

(Verses 24 to 26). Some of his surnames (biruda) were :—The angry punisher of rival kings; he whose arms resemble (the coils of the serpent) Sēsha; he who is versed in protecting the earth; the destroyer of those kings who break their word; he who satisfies suppliants; he who is fierce in war; the king of kings and the supreme lord of kings; the destroyer of the three kings (of the south); he who terrifies hostile kings; the Sultan among Hindu kings; he who crushes the wicked like tigers.

(Verse 27). He is served by the Aṅga, Vaṅga, Kaliṅga and other kings, who speak thus :—"Look (upon me), Oh great king! Be victorious! Live (long)!"

(Verse 28). Seated on a jewelled throne at Vijayanagara, king Kṛishṇarāya, whose liberality was worthy to be praised by the learned, having surpassed Nṛiga and other kings in wisdom, and having bestowed abundant riches on all suppliants on earth, was resplendent with fame from the eastern mountain to the slopes of the mountain of the west and from the mountain of gold (Mēru) to (Rāma's) Bridge.

ANOTHER INSCRIPTION OF THE REIGN OF KṚISHṆADĒVARĀYA, ŚAKA SAMVAT 1450.

THE inscription edited below also belongs to the reign of Kṛishṇadēvarāya but is dated six years after his first grant to the maṭha, No. IV above. In the meantime the donee of No. IV above was no more and was succeeded by Sadāśiva Sarasvati and to this latter the present grant is made. The inscription recording the grant is in Nandināgari characters and in the Saṅskṛit language. In the year S' 1450 corresponding to the cyclic year Virōdhi, on a Sunday, which was the Paurṇimā tithi (full-moon) in the month Vaiśākha and was coupled with the nakshatra Viśākha, the king Kṛishṇadēvarāya granted the village of Udayambākkam to Sadāśiva Sarasvati, the disciple of Chandraśēkhara Sarasvati (Chandrachūḍa of No. IV above) ; the ceremony of making the dāna took place in the presence of the god Virūpāksha, on the bank of the river Tuṅgabhadrā; at that time the name of the village was changed into Kṛishṇarāyapura. The village of Udayambākkam is said to have been situated in the Paḍavīḍurājyam, a sub-division of the Jayachōḷamaṇḍalam, in the Tirukkāḷikan-iraṇḍāṟṟu-paṟṟu, belonging to the Kaḷattūr-kōṭṭam, in the Śrīvalimalaināḍu of the Chaṅgalipaṭṭu-sīmā; and it was situated on the bank of the Kshīranadi. The boundaries of the village are given as follows :—

On the west was situated the village of Praḷḷyanūr;

on the north	Maṇappākkam;
on the east	Kaḷattūr, and on the south	Puṇyappaṭṭu.

In the document it is stated that Sabhāpati was the composer of it and that it was engraved upon copper-plates by Vīraṇāchāṟi, son of Mallaṇāchāri; and at the end the sign-manual of the king, the words Śrī Virūpāksha, is written in large sized Telugu-Kannaḍa characters.

The following note regarding the date was kindly supplied to me by Mr. L. D. Swamikkannu Pillai :—

"S'. 1450, Virōdhi, Vaiśākha paurṇimā, Viśākha nakshatra, Sunday. The tithi and nakshatra in question ended on Monday 4th May, 1528 A. D. at 23 ghaṭika and 7 ghaṭika, respectively after mean sunrise. As the tithi and nakshatra must have commenced at or about the corresponding parts of the previous day, Sunday, the date referred to is therefore Sunday, 3rd May, 1528 A.D."

Ib

The names of places occurring in this inscription are—Udayambākkam, Paḍavīḍu-rājyam, Jayaṅgoṇḍachōḷamaṇḍalam, Tirukkāḷigan-raṇḍārṟuparṟu, Kaḷattūr-kōṭṭam, Śrīvalimalaināḍu, Chaṅgalipaṭṭu-sīmā, Praḷḷayanūr (?), Maṇappākkam, Kaḷattūr, Puṇyappaṭṭu and Kshīranadi. Of these Tirukkāḷingan-raṇḍārṟu-parṟu seems to have received its name from Tirukkāḷikkāḍu (?) in the Conjeevaram Tālūkā and the two rivers bounding this parṟu are the Pālār and the rivulet which proceeds from the Tennēri lake; it is in this iraṇḍārṟu-parṟu that the Śrīvalimalai and the nāḍu named after it is also situated. Śrīvalimalai (a corruption of Śrīvallabhamalai) has to be identified with Palayaśīvaram. Kaḷattūr-kōṭṭam is an ancient division of the Chōḷa period and receives its name from the village of Kaḷattūr, the railway station next to Chingleput. Udayambākkam, Kaḷattūr, Maṇappākkam and Puṇyappaṭṭu, which appears to be the same as Punnampaṭṭu, are in the Chingleput Taluka. Kshīranadi is the Saṅskṛit translation of the Tamiḷ name of the river Pālār. The temple of Virūpāksha mentioned in the grant is situated, as every one knows, in the Hampi-Hāḷupaṭṭaṇa, very near the river Tuṅgabhadrā.

(The historical part of this inscription is similar to that in No. IV above).

On a Sunday which corresponded with the full moon tithi of the month Vaiśākha in the year Virōdhin, S' 1450 and the nakshatra Viśākha, the king Kṛishṇadēvarāya granted the village of Udayambākkam under the name of Kṛishṇarāya-puram, in the presence of the god Virūpāksha, on the bank of the river Tuṅgabhadrā to Sadāśiva-Sarasvati, the disciple of Chandraśēkhara Sarasvati.

The village granted was situated in the Cheṅgalipaṭṭu Śīmā, a portion of the Śrīvalimalai-nāḍu, situated in the Kaḷattūr-kōṭṭam, a division of the Tirukkāḷiganṛaṇḍāṟṟu-pparṟu, in the Paḍavī-ḍurājya which was a sub-division of the Jayachōḷa-maṇḍalam.

This village was situated on the east of the great agrahāra named Praḷḷayanūr, on the south of the village of Maṇappākkam, on the west of the village of Kaḷattūr and on the north of the great village of Puṇyappaṭṭu.

The document was composed by Sabhāpati and was engraved on copper-plates by Vīraṇāśāri, the son of Mallaṇa.

No. VI.

A FRAGMENTARY INSCRIPTION OF VIJAYANAGARA KINGS OF THE KARNĀṬA OR THE LAST DYNASTY.

THIS fragmentary inscription is engraved on only one side of a plate, which belonged to a set, the remaining plates of which seem to have been lost. It is written in the Nandināgari characters and in the Saṅskṛit language. In it the genealogy of the kings of the Karnāṭa dynasty is traced from the moon. Some of the descendants of the moon who were the ancestors of these kings are said to be Budha, Purūravas, Āyus, Nahusha, Yayāti, Pūru, Bharata, Śantanu ; the fourth from this last was Vijaya ; from him was born Abhimanyu and from him Parīkshit. The eighth in descent from Parīkshit was Nanda ; the ninth from this king was Chaḷikka ; the seventh from Chaḷikka was Rājanarēndra ; and the tenth in descent from him was Bijjaḷēndra, whose third descendant was Vīra

Hemmāḷiraya, the lord of Māyāpuri. The fourth from him came Tāta Pinnama, the first real ancestor of this dynasty. From here the genealogy as far as it goes in this fragment is as follows :—

Tāta-Pinnama I
Sōmidēva
Rāghavadēva
Pinnama II
(the lord of Āravīṭinagara)
Bukka.

The subsequent genealogy of this family as we meet with in other copper-plate grants is given for the information of the readers of this brochure (1).

From this incomplete document it is impossible to say to whose reign it belonged.

(Verse 1). I take refuge in that pair of objects which is to be worshipped by the gods, (and) at whose meritorious touch a stone became the best of woman.

(Verse 2). I take refuge in that Vishvaksēna whose more than hundred attendants, the elephant-headed (Gaṇēśa) etc., remove the obstacles (in the way) of (his) devotees.

(Verse 3). Victorious is the luminary (viz., the Moon) which rose from the milk-sea (which is) the left eye of Hari (Vishṇu), (which is) the support of the chakōra (birds), (and) which sustains the life of the gods.

(Verse 4). The grandson of him (viz., the Moon) (was) Budha's son Purūravas; his (son was) Āyus; his son was Nahusha; from him was born Yayāti; (and) from him Pūru. In his race was born king Bharata; in his lineage Śantanu; the fourth from him was Vijaya; from him was born Abhimanyu; (and) from him Parīkshit.

(Verse 5). The eighth (in descent) from him was Nanda; the ninth from this king was king Chaḷikka; the seventh from him was Narēndra (whose name was) preceded by Rāja (i.e., Rājanarēndra), (and) who was devoted to Śrīpati (Vishṇu); the tenth from him in this (world) was king Bijjaḷēndra; (and) the third from him was Vīra-Hemmāḷirāya, the lord of Māyāpuri, who prostrated himself before Murārī (Vishṇu).

(Verse 6). The fourth from him was king Tāta-Pinnama, at whose sight the crowd of enemies trembled; from him was born that king Śōmidēva who took from the enemy seven forts in a single day; his heroic son was king Rāghavadēva; (and) from him was born the glorious king Pinnama.

(Verse 7). The son of this lord of the city of Āravīṭi was king Bukka, whose power was (continually) rising, (and) who firmly established even the kingdom of Sāḷuva-Nṛisiṁha.

(Verse 8). Just as Vishṇu (married) Lakshmī, Bukka, the ornament of kings (and) the kalpa-tree, to scholars, married the prosperous Ballāmbikā, who surpassed the celestial nymphs by her personal beauty, (and) whose virtue was highly respected.

AN INSCRIPTION OF THE TIME OF VIJAYA RAGHUNĀTHA TOṆḌAIMĀN OF PUDUKKOTTAI; ŚAKA SAMVAT, 1613.

THIS is an inscription which is engraved on the two sides of a single plate, in Tamiḷ characters and alphabet. The rectangular plate has a small circular top, on the front portion of which are cut the figures of a Liṅga and of a Dēvī, each separated by lines which represent canopies over their head; on the back of this circular portion of the plate are cut the words Śri Rāmajayam in Telugu characters. The Kumbhakōṇam maṭha is intimately connected with Jambukēśvaram in the island of Śrīraṅgam and hence, I am inclined to take the Liṅga and the Dēvī to be meant by the engraver to refer to Jambunātha and His consort Akhilaṇḍēśvarī. The writing on the plate is in good condition, but the plate itself is broken in its corners and the damage to the inscription incurred thereby is however practically nothing.

The record belongs to the time of the Pudukkōṭṭai chief Vijaya Raghunātha Toṇḍaimān, son of Tirumalaiyappa Toṇḍaimān and is dated the 15th day of the month Tai in the year Dundubhi, which was also the Śaka year 1613. In this year, the servants of Vijaya Raghunātha Toṇḍaimān, who held lands in the southern division of Anbil, made a gift in perpetuity of certain paddy and money payments to one Veṅkaṭakṛishṇayyan, son of Veṅkaṭayyan of Kāñchīpuram. The inscription begins with a verbose and bombastic panegyric like those of the kings of Vijayanagara Empire, which they themselves did not claim but which has been usually employed by the Ramnad Zamindars in their copper-plate grants. As is also usual with these latter grants, all the kings of the Vijayanagara Empire are enumerated one after another in an irregular, unchronological order. The donee, Venkaṭakṛishṇayyan of Kāñchīpuram, seems to be an agent of the maṭha sent to be in charge of the landed estates belonging to the maṭha, which were situated in the Trichinopoly District and adjoining Jambukēśvaram. Anbil, Tiruvāśi and the adjacent places have even now respectable families of Kaḷḷars, who bear the title nāḍāvān (a corrupt form of nādāḷvān); perhaps the ancestors of these were holding jaghirs under the Pudukkōṭṭai chieftain and rendered military service to him. The actual grants made by these to the brāhmaṇa agent of the maṭha are:—

(a) a kuṟuṇi of paddy per head per mensem to be paid by all those who held appointments (?) under the Toṇḍaimān;

(b) a sum equal to the pay of one man to be paid as umbaḷam by every ten of the servant classes of men;

(c) they should also give eight marakkāls of paddy per annum;

(d) three paḍis of rice per diem for the Paḷḷaya-chchōttu-kaṭṭaḷai; and lastly

(e) two pairs of male cloths and two female cloths per annum also had to be given as long as the moon and the sun lasted.

The village of Anbil is said to have been situated in the Panṟi-śūḻ-nāḍu of the Rājēndra-śōḻanāḍu, a sub-division of the Rājarājavaḷanāḍu. This village is situated on the north bank of the river Koleroon.

The Vijayanagara Emperors who are mentioned in the document are given in the following order: Mallikārjunadēva Mahārāya, Prauḍhadēva Mahārāya, Yānaigundi Dēva Mahārāya, Virūpākshadēva Mahārāya and Śrīraṅgadēva Mahārāya. The Vijayanagara (or rather the Chandragiri) prince who might be taken to be the contemporary of the Pudukkōṭṭai chieftain Vijaya Raghunātha Toṇḍaimān is either Raṅga VI or his successor.

(A levy has been fixed) at the rate of a kuṟuṇi of paddy per head per mensem on all those who take .....; an amount equal to the pay and the umbaḷam of one man in every ten on all those who are in receipt of (monthly) pay; on all others eight marakkāls of paddy per annum, of paḷḷaya-chchōttu (?) the daily supply of 3 paḍis of the kaṭṭaḷai-aṟiśi (the rice that is spent for some fixed ceremony in a temple, such as feeding some one or bathing the image with milk, &c.) and two pairs of male-cloths and two female-cloths annually: these, we have bound ourselves to give; this charitable gift, I (perhaps meaning the donee) shall receive in the manner narrated above as long as the sun and moon last and live in ease and happiness. Those who do injury to or stop this charity shall gain the same sin which he who obtains by the killing of a tawny cow on the bank of the river Ganges in Kāśi and killing of a brāhmaṇa and a woman. This charity is (binding) alike (on all) those who are said to be the servants (of the Tōṇḍaimāṉ aforementioned). Those that conduct this charity will obtain the merit of having set up a thousand and eight Śivaliṅgas, of having established agrahāras and satrās, and shall live eternally in company of their sons and sons' sons and with riches. This is the signature of Vēlāyudaṉ, son of..... ..... āchāryār, who wrote thus (the deed). May the goddess Periyanāyaki grant us her aid.

AN INSCRIPTION OF THE REIGN OF VIJAYARAṄGA-CHOKKANĀTHA NĀYA-NAYYAVĀRU: ŚAKA SAMVAT 1630.

THE subjoined inscription is also engraved on two sides of a single plate. This plate has got a projection on the top of semi-circular shape; on the front side of this bit are engraved the sun and the moon, on the left and right respectively; on the left a Liṅga is placed under a tree and worshipped by an elephant and a spider; and on the right the figure of a standing Dēvī. Below the roots of the tree is a devotee seated cross legged and with hands folded across the chest in the añjali pose and below the Liṅga is a square divided into nine equal portions. There is absolutely no doubt in this case that the Liṅga represents the god Jambunātha and the goddess Akhilāṇḍēśvarī of the temple at Jambukēśvaram. The tree under which the Liṅga is represented is the Jambu tree peculiar to the temple of Jambukēśvaram (the sthalavṛiksha). The legend of this shrine is that an elephant and a spider worshipped daily the god Śiva at this place very devoutly and after its death the spider was reborn as the great Chōḷa king of the earlier times, Kō-ch-Cheṅgaṇṇāṇ. The devotee represents Jambu-muni from whose head, the sthalapurāṇa states, the Jambu tree sprang up and the nine squares perhaps stand for the tank Jambu-tīrtha in the temple. On the top of the first side of the plate and immediately below the figures described above, are engraved the words Śrī Chandramauḷīśvarasvāmi. The record belongs to the reign of the Nāyaka, king of Madhura, Vijayaraṅga-Chokkanātha and is written in the Telugu characters and language. As is the characteristic feature with the inscriptions of this king's reign, the reduplication of consonants unnecessarily is met with in this one also; e.g., in manddu in ll. 6, 7, 8 and 15; in uṇḍḍagānu in l. 9; in koṇḍḍāṇ in l. 15; in vuṇḍḍeṭandduna in l. 17; in naḍipiñchcha and ājñāpiñchchi in l. 18; in maṅgalamllo in l. 22; in puramllo and jembbukēśvaram in l. 28; in śuṅkka in. l. 32; in vrāyiñchchi in l. 33; and in anubhaviñchchu in l. 34. The inscription is dated the Śaka year 1630 corresponding to the cyclic year Vikṛiti.

In this year on Monday, the first tithi of the bright half of the month Kārttika, in the Rōhiṇi Nakshatra, the king Vijayaraṅga-Chokkanātha made a grant of lands situated in a number of places, at the instance of the then svāmi of the Śāradā Maṭha, for the maintenance of the feeding of Brāhmaṇas in the maṭha situated in the Poṇvāśi-koṇḍāṇ street in Gajāraṇyakshētra. The following note has been kindly supplied to me by Mr. L.D. Swāmikkannu Pillai regarding the date:—"S. 1630. Vikṛiti, Kārttika Śukla 1, Induvāsara (Monday), Rōhini Nakshatra. Śukla, 1 tithi and Rōhiṇi Nakshatra cannot join together in Kārttika lunar month but may join in Jyēshṭha month. The date referred to was possibly Monday 10th May A.D. 1708 on which day Śukla 1 ended about sunrise—It was also a day of Rōhiṇī Nakshatra." The over-lord of the Madura Nāyaka mentioned in this document is said to be Vēṅkaṭadēva Mahārāya; he might perhaps be Raṅga alias Vēṅkaṭa given as the grandson of Vīra Vēṅkaṭa in the genealogical table appended to No. VI above. This Vēṅkaṭa-dēva Mahārāya is said to have been reigning, seated on his jewelled throne in Ghanagiri, that is, Penugoṇḍa, his capital. Vijayaraṅga-Chokkanātha calls his own Government as the Dakshiṇa-siṁhāsana and its rulers, the Dakshiṇa-siṁhāsanādhyakshas. The genealogy of the donor is given as follows:

Viśvanādha Nāyanivāru of the Kāśyapa-gōtra, the founder of the dynasty.
|
Chokkanādha Nāyanivāru.
|
Raṅgakṛishṇa-Mudduvīrappa Nāyanivāru.
Vijayaraṅga-Chokkanādha Nāyanivāru.

The last king of the above table was also the last of the kings of the dynasty of the Madura Nāyakas. He was the grandson of the famous Maṅgammāḷ whose memory was fondly cherished by the people of the southern portion of the Madras Presidency and whose name and glory still lingers there. The earlier portion of this king's reign was under the efficient regency of his grand-mother Maṅgammāḷ, because his father died within seven years after his (father's) accession to the throne and Vijayaraṅga-Chokkanātha was a minor. When he himself died his queen Mīnākshī succeeded him; it was in this reign that Trichinopoly, the more important seat of the Government of the Madura Nāyakas, fell into the hands of the Nabobs of the Carnatic, by the machinations of their General Chanda Sahib.

The name of the svāmi of the Kāmākōṭi-Piṭha at the time of this grant is not given; he is referred to only as Lōkaguru Śrīmad Śaṅkarāchārya-svāmulavāru. The plots of lands granted for the annadāna kaṭṭaḷa were situated in the following places:—in Mahēndramaṅgalam in the Toṭṭiyam-sīmā; in Kṛishṇāpuram; in Kārakkāḍu; in Koṇḍayampēṭṭai; in Maṅgamāmbāpuram in the Tiruchchendorai-sīmā; in Ariyūr in the Tinnam-sīmā and in Ariyamaṅgalam in the Kōnāḍu-sīmā. The document also records that certain dishes for naivēdya were to be prepared and offered daily to the god of the Jambukēśvaram temple; they are, cooked rice prepared from four paḍis of rice; dōśē, atirasa, sugiyan and dipamchamaru (oil for lamps); for this purpose the tolls collected on the two banks of the river (or the rivers Kāvērī and Koḷḷiḍam) were also assigned. The usual verses imploring the maintenance of the charity by the members of one's own race or those of other kings and the imprecatory verses are seen at the end, as also the signature of the king in big bold Telugu letters written by the king's own hand, as the document asserts.

The places mentioned in this inscription are: Gajāraṇyakshētram; Ponvāśikoṇḍān street in it; Toṭṭiyamsīmē and Mahēndramaṅgalam in it; Gōpālasvāmi's garden; Kṛishṇāpuram; Kārakkāḍu

Koṇḍayampēṭṭai, Tiruchchenḍoraisīmē and Mangammāpuram in it; Tinnamsīmē and Ariyalūr in it and Ariyamaṅgalam in the Kōnāḍusīmē. Of these, Gajāraṇyakshētram is another name for Jambukēśvaram or Tiruvaṇaikkāval. Which of the present streets of this town was known as the Ponvāśikoṇḍān street cannot be ascertained. The name Ponvaśikoṇḍān has reference to the history of the Śaiva Saint, Tirujñānasambandha; when he and his elder contemporary Appar were obliged to stay away for a long time at Tiruvīḻimiḻalai on account of a severe famine that was then raging, the god of the temple of that place (Śiva) was pleased to grant to each of these devotees a gold piece a day for the maintenance of themselves and their dependents. The boy saint was fully conscious of his greatness, whereas the elderly saint never recognised any greatness in himself. So, the god, for the purpose of teaching better behaviour to the younger saint, was giving him a slightly debased coin, while he was systematically given a sound one to the elder. On account of the debasement in the coin, a small discount was always deducted by grocers when the money of Tirujñānasambandha was offered to them. On imploring the god to treat him equally with Apparsvāmigaḷ he obtained thenceforth sound coins. Toṭṭiyam-sīmē takes its name from the village

Toṭṭiyam in the Muśiri Tālūkā. This place has a large population of Telugu speaking Śūdras who are reputed to be masters of black-magic and are held in dread by the other people of the surrounding country. Mahēndramaṅgalam is on the bank of the river Kavērī opposite to Lālāppēṭṭai, a station on the Erode-Trichinopoly branch of the South Indian Railway and near the village of Śrīnivāsanallūr; the maṭha has still landed property here. There is a small stone shrine at Sannyāśi-maḍam, a hamlet of Mahēndramaṅgalam belonging to the Kumbhakōṇam maṭha, dedicated to Vēṇugōpālasvāmin. On the doorway of the shrine is carved a figure of an advaiti sannyāsin with his daṇḍa and ghaṭa. This temple and the adjoining lands are still in the possession of the Śaṅkarāchārya maṭha of Kumbhakōṇam. This shrine may be identified with the Gōpālasvāmin temple mentioned in the document. Kṛishṇāpuram is a village about half a mile to the east of Sannyaśi-māḍam. Kāraikkāḍu is some five miles west of Mahēndramaṅgalam in the Muśiri Tālūkā. Koṇḍayampēṭṭai is a suburb of Jambukēśvaram and Tiruchchendurai is a village situated 6 miles higher up Trichinopoly on the south bank of the Kavērī and has in it an ancient Śiva temple. It is not possible to identify Maṅgammāpuram. Tinnam-sīmē receives its name from the village of Tinniyam in the Trichinopoly Tālūkā and Ariyalūr is a town in the Uḍaiyārpāḷayam Tālūkā. The present Pudukkōṭṭai State and its surrounding country were known in ancient times as Kōnāḍu and Ariyamaṅgalam is a village very near Trichinopoly.

A FIRMĀN BY THE EMPEROR OF DELHI (?).

HIJIRA 1088.

THE inscription edited below is a firmān issued in favour of His Holiness, the Svāmi Paramahaṁsa Parivrājakāchārya of the Śāradā maṭha in the sacred place of Kāñchi, otherwise known as the Satyavratakshētra, embodying in it an annual inām of 115 varāhas, meant for the purposes of worship and daily offerings to the god Chandramauḷiśvara and for the feeding of Brāhmaṇas. The grantor of the inām is described as 'an Emperor who is obeyed by all the world, who is a Sultan upon whom all the mahārājas depend and who is the representative of god on earth.'

The inscription is written in the Telugu alphabet; the first part of the record which is engraved on the first side of the first plate is in the Saṅskṛit language; the second part beginning from

l. 13 up to l. 27 is in the Persian language; the third part, from ll. 27 to 39 which embodies the praśasti of the svāmis of the Śāradā-maṭha, is once again in Saṅskṛit; then, the fourth part, from ll. 40 to 47 is in the Telugu language; the last and the fifth part is again in Persian. The inscription is dated the 1st of the month Shauval of the year 1088 of the Hijira Era, which is equivalent to 1710 A.D. In A.D. 1707, the great Moghul Emperor Aurangazib died and was succeeded by Bahadur Shah, but the latter died in an attempt to put down the Sikhs at Lahore in 1712. The date of our firmān falls within the reign of this Emperor, who is said to have been a wise and valiant prince, and as such might very likely have made the grant of the inām to the svāmi of the Śāradā-maṭha of Kāñchi. But the document is silent about the actual name of the Emperor who ordered the inām to be given to the maṭha and therefore we may believe that it was perhaps issued by Bahadur Shah. The order is addressed to the village officers, villagers and the tax-gatherers in Changalpaṭṭu division; the person who made a representation to the imperial Court for the granting of this inam was Liṅgōji Sangarsu, the Tarafdār (collector of revenue) of the district of Mēlpāka belonging to the Changalpaṭṭu jurisdiction; at the end of the record is the signature of Tamada Bhānuji, the District Revenue Accountant.

The village Mēlpākkam mentioned in the inscription is situated in the Madhurāntakam Talūka of the Chingleput District.

I am indebted to Prof. K. Amṛita Rao, M. A., the polyglot scholar and eminent philologist, for the translation of and notes on this copper-plate grant, and I take this opportunity to offer him my grateful thanks for the trouble he has taken on my account.

TRANSLATION.*

Salutation to the preceptors!

"Oh Lord, who is the beloved son of Śaṅkara, the remover of all obstacles (difficulties) and the dispeller of the sorrows of those who bow down to thee; take a delight in residing (be pleased to reside) in the maṇḍapa (temple) made of brilliant gems in the middle of my lotus-like heart. May Śāradā reside in my lotus-like mouth, Śāradā, who is, as it were, the stream of honey flowing from the lotus-like face of Brahmā, Śāradā, whose actions (glorious utterances) are praised by the several Vēdas and whose lustre equals that of crores of moons shining simultaneously. Reverence to Śambhu, who is rendered beautiful by a chowri, which is the moon that lightly rests upon his lofty head, and who is the pillar of foundation for building 'the city of the three worlds'. Let the tusk of the boar of amusement of Hari protect us, on account of which tusk, the earth looked like a beautiful umbrella on the top of Mount Sumēru.

AN INSCRIPTION OF ŚAKA SAMVAT 1608.

THE subjoined inscription is engraved on two sides of a single plate in an extremely slip-shod manner and in a kind of Nāgari character which is quite modern and which is very peculiar for the shapes of the letters and it is full of mistakes. The first part of the inscription from l. 1 to l. 3 is in the Telugu language; then comes the Saṅskṛit praśasti of the Svāmis of the Śāradā-maṭha of Kāñchi and cover ll. 3 to 15 and the rest of the document is in Telugu.

The inscription is dated Saturday, the 15th tithi of the bright half of the month Vaiśākha, in the year Prabhava which corresponded with the Śaka year 1608. On this day there occurred an eclipse of the moon; on this puṇyakāla, Mahadēvēndra Sarasvati, disciple of Chandraśēkhara Sarasvati of the Śāraḍā-maṭha of Kāñchi gave to a brāhmaṇa named Rāma Śāstri who belonged to the Hoysaṇa Karṇāṭa sect (i.e., the Karṇāṭakas of the Hoysaḷa country, one of the sub-division of the Karṇāṭakas) and of the Āśvalāyana sūtra and Kāmākāyana Viśvāmitra gōtra, land in the village of Mēlupākkam and some taxes, two varāhas per annum from the maṭha, and two house-sites. The village of Mēlupāka belonged to the Jāghīr-sīmē granted to the maṭha in the Chaṅgalpaṭṭu jurisdiction sometime before the date of our record by the brothers Akkanna and Mādanna of Gōlakoṇḍa. As regards the date, Mr. L. D. Swamikkannu Pillai writes as follows.—"Ś 1608, Prabhava, Viśākha, Śudi. 15, Saturday, lunar eclipse. Ś 1608 A.D. =1686-87; but Prabhava was A.D. 1687-88. The day intended was Saturday, 16th April, A.D. 1687. The tithi commenced at ·58 of the day and ended at ·55 of the following day. There was no lunar eclipse on the day in question." The brothers Akkanna and Mādanna mentioned in the inscription under notice were the ministers of the Kuṭb Shāhi Sultān, Abul Hāsan. They are also said to be the uncles of the devotee Rāmadāsa, who is believed by people to have held the Tahsildāri of Bhadrāchalam and who was put to torture for embezzlement of the public revenue, for the purpose of building a temple for the god Rāma and endowing it. Abul Hāsan, the last of the Sultāns of Gōlkoṇḍa, is said to have confided the conduct of the affairs of his Government to these brāhmaṇa ministers and was himself enjoying life. The following account of these two persons is taken from the Madras Epigraphist's Annual Report for 1915. "The Dutch journalist Havart supplies some information about Akkanna and Mādanna, the ministers of the Kuṭb Shāhi kings, Abdulla Kuṭb Shāh and Abul Ḥāsan. They were two brothers born of a very poor family who entered service as shroffs in A.D. 1666 on a pay of 10 gilders per mensem under Saiyyad Mustapha, a nobleman of Gōlkoṇḍa known to fame as Mir Zumla. Mādanna alias Sūryaprakāśa Rao is stated by the Dutch journalist to have been an intelligent man whereas his brother Akkanna was a man of cunning and roguery with very little of understanding. The brothers rose in rank by an apparent act of treachery which cost Mir Zumla his high office under the Nabobs of Gōlkoṇḍa. Mādanna became a very prominent figure in the administration of the kingdom so much so that the Sultān left everything to his care and was satisfied with receiving 75,000 dollars for his personal use. Mādanna was well versed in Persian, Hindustani and the Vernaculars of the country and lived in a kingly style. As the golden palanquin in which he went out, passed in the streets, people showed their respect by stopping on the way. He was very kind to the Dutch and the author of the journal, Havart, says that he had the honour of seeing Mādanna often.

"Having served under Abdulla Kuṭb Shāh (A.D. 1611-72) the two brothers seem to have maintained the same high position also under the reign of Abul Hāsan, the successor of Abdulla Kuṭb Shāh. But they were not to maintain this long. In A.D. 1685, the Mughal king, Aurangazeb marched with his army into Gōlkoṇḍa and plundered first the house of Mādanna. The people were in a state of panic and accused Mādanna of high treason. Under orders from the Sultān they murdered the two brothers who were once the bosom friends of the king, in a most ignominious way. Akkanna and Mādanna were dragged along the streets in the presence of the people (fig. d. on Plate II). The head of Mādanna was severed from the body and sent to Aurangazeb while that of Akkanna was trampled under the foot of an elephant. The death of the two brothers must have happened after the 29th of October 1685 when the Mughal army entered Gōlkoṇḍa and perhaps before the end of that month. The Sultān Abul Hāsan who thought that he would now be safe was himself deposed and confined in Daulatabad in 1687."

The Prime-Minister of Abul-Hassan.

Four pictures are reproduced from Havart's Journal. Under each one of the pictures, Havart has affixed a short passage in the Dutch language giving an estimate of each of the personages depicted there. They run as follows:—

Akkanna and Mādanna.

Sultaan Aboe-il-Hassan Kotbsiah Konig van Golkonda,=Sultan Abu-l-Hassan Kutbshah, King of Golkonda.

Nemo felix ntae obitum=No one is happy before his death.

Hy was een Koning in de naam, niot in der daad.

Quam tot die waardigheit van de alderlaagste staat.

En liet don andere, zig zelf, ent Ryk bestieren.

Een dom, onnozel Mensch, niet Vorstlyk in manieren

Toen nu't qeluk met hem een tyd lang had gefopt (?)

Wierd hy don Eygen Schuld van Kroon En Throon geschopt.

Kroop in het zant, vrat stof, moest zich als slaaf Vermindren.

Wee Zulken land alwaar de Koningen Zyn Kind'ren.

TRANSLATION.

He was a king (only) in name, (and) not in deed (actually). He attained to that dignity from the very lowest position and allowed himself and his kingdom to be governed by others. He was a stupid and silly man, and not kingly in manners (never behaved like a king). When now fortune had fooled with him a long time, he was kicked from (deprived of) his crown and throne by his own fault. He crept in the sand, ate dust, and had to humiliate himself (behave) like a slave. Woe to that country where kings are (mere) children.

Door sidemaktas swaard, teynd moet de last tog dragem.

(TRANSLATION).

Here we see Mādanna drawn to life, who was the play thing of fortune from the beginning of his youth until his death. He has risen from nothing to such a high level that even the king must obey him. He has removed his own master from office and state (O sacrilegious act of scoundrelism!)

Nay, he dared to do anything. But, while attempting to deliver his king into the hands of the enemy he was discovered and lost his life through Sidemakta's sword. In the end, after all the burden must be borne.

Wiens schelmery en trots: niet syn om uyt te spreken.

Geen grooter booswicht droeg de stad van Golconda.

Deelaghtig aan 'tverraad zyns broers, nooit wel te vreden, Heest hy de zelve straf op eenen tyt geleden.

TRANSLATION.

There we see in miniature, the portrait of Akkanna a beast in human form: whose cunning, wicked tricks, whose scoundrelism and pride, should not be uttered (spoken about). No greater villain did the town of Golconda ever witness. Participating in the treason of his brother, he was never contented he suffered the same punishment and at the same time as Mādanna.

ABSTRACT OF CONTENTS.[1]

Śrī Mahādēva Sarasvati, the disciple of Śrī Chandraśēkhara Sarasvati, who was an ornament of the world; who belonged to the Śāradā maṭha, which is situated in the divine (city of) Kāñchi, in which are the temples of Ekāmranātha and Kāmākṣhi who is adored by the thirty-three crores of gods and of Hastigirināṭha and Mahādēvī; who was delighting the crowd of learned men with his nectar-like words, which was sweet as the honey that flows from the wreath of jasmine flowers which adorns the crown of Sarasvatī; who was ever interested in the Advaita-vidya; who was characterised by tranquility and self-control; who, having removed the thorns, namely, the heretic faiths, had established the religion of the Vēdas and Vēdānta; who was consecrated to the seat of the paramahaṁsa and parivrājakāchārya,—(Mahādēva Sarasvati) granted a copper-plate deed to Rāma Śāstri, of the Hoysaṇa Karnāṭaka sect, belonging to the Āśvalāyana sūtra and the Vāmakāyana-Viśvāmitra-gōtra, thereby granting an agrahāra in Mēlupāka, the freehold village given to the svāmi by Akkanna and Madanna of Gōlkoṇḍa, near Chaṅgalpaṭṭu; the boundaries of the agrahāra are: on the south, the village of Mēlupāka, and on the north and the west, the lake. The lands belonging to the agrahāra were to be irrigated (?) with the water flowing from the first channel (kaṇṇāṛu); two house-sites and an annual grant of two varāhas were given (to Rāma Śāstri ?); three mara (kāls) per kalam (of paddy etc.) for the kānukōyi and the dēśamukhi and some other incomes to the god Chandramauḷīśvara (were ordered to be given ?)

After this the name of the god, Śrī Rāma, is invoked and the record ends with the usual ślōkas extolling the merits of gift and its protection and invoking the protection to the present grant of the god Chandramauḷīśvara.
